

The greater the number of discrete sources for news the American public has, the more diverse and, collectively, balanced the viewpoints we will receive, and the better able we will be to evaluate wherein lies the truth or value on any given reported subject. I urge the adoption of the most restrictive policies on consolidation of ownership, management, or control of public information outlets. The less cross ownership and multiple ownership that is permitted for those who are given the privilege of exploiting the public airways for profit, the better.
